FRIDAY EVENING, AUG. 11, 1893.

S wais Death in a Dream. A bad dream came startlingly true in the minutest details in New York, on Wednesday, when a rotten rope, which held one end of a scaffold on which three painters were painting the rear (wall of the building at 55 South street, broke and precipitated the workmen six stories to the ground. James Fisher, who had only been hired that morning, will die, and there is litle hope of the others, James Dwyer and Benjamin Simons, who were injured internally.

Dwyer said to Simons, his partner, when he went to work that morning:
"Ben, I had a bad dream last night. I dreamed that you and I and another man were wo king on a scaffold. The rope broke and we were all thrown

"And what then?" asked Simons. "I woke up just as the rope broke. I guess we were all killed, though."

Just then Fisher, who had been hired to assist in the work without the howledge of Dwyer, came up. It was rranged that all three should work on the same scaffold, a rude affair about 18 feet long and three feet wide. The scaffold was drawn up to the roof, where Dwyer and Simons had left it Tuesday night. Simons stepped onto it and Fisher followed him.

Dwyer held back and examined the fastenings of the ropes carefully. Si-mons laughed at him, and told him to come on.

"I don't like this rope," said Dwyer, pointing to the rope holding up one end of the scoffold—the same which af terward broke. "Come on," said Simons, impatiently, "It held us up yesterday all right. It's safe enough. What is there to be Dwyer finally yielded, and stepped on the scaffold, holding on by the cor-nice, however, and letting his weight down gently. The rope held. "I told you so," said Simons.

The scaffold was lowered about eight feet below the roof, where the men had left off work last night. The s affold held all right until 9 o'clock, wien the rope parted without warn-

The three men were precipitated on a level to a leavy glass skylight on a level with the first floor above the street, at the rear of the building. The glass was supported by heavy galvanized iron crosspieces, but the force of the fall sent the men crashing through the glass, breaking a half dozen cross-pieces to the floor.

Plumber F. K. Whitmore, who was at work in the basement, heard the crash and ran up the steps at the rear of the building. He saw the three nen lying unconscious in a heap-covered with the paint from their buckets which had fallen with them. Help was call which had fallen with them. Help was called and the unfortunate trio were taken to the chembers. Street Hospital. Fisher's skull is frequent and recovery is impossible. Inver regained his senses sufficiently to dit. Capt in Cortweight about the accident band Taylor Brothers, his enployers, for it, and said that the rope was decayed, aprain Cortweight caused the broken rope to receive and and taken to the station house. on ed and taken to the station house.

"I could almost break it by simply pulling

"I could atmost break it by simply puring on it," said be.

The scaffold was, the police say, not only supported by the rotten rope which broke, but was also without guard rail, which, under the provisions of the law, must be fixed at the outer edge of the scaffold. Both the ropes and the scaffold had been used throughout the job.

Taylor Brothers, the contractors, were promptly notified of the accident, and the senior member, I dward S. Taylor, was put
